

Craig Silvey

Craig Silvey was only 19 when he finished his first novel Rhubarb. His award winning second novel, 'Jasper Jones', is often referred to as the Australian 'To Kill A Mockingbird' and has become a classroom classic. It has been adapted into both a film and play.

His long-anticipated new novel Honeybee did not disappoint. Beautifully written and flawlessly executed, this compelling coming-of-age story, about a young Australian teenager struggling with gender dysphoria, is one not to be missed. Craig currently lives in Fremantle he is a musician and plays the electric ukulele in The Nancy Sikes band.

Craig Silvey – Honeybee

Craig's website <https://www.craigsilvey.com/>

Craig Silvey talks with the Australian Writers Centre <https://www.writerscentre.com.au/blog/ep-352/>

Craig Silvey talks with RN The Book Show about the inspiration behind Honeybee
<https://www.abc.net.au/radionational/programs/the-book-show/craig-silvey-honeybee-transgender/12721330>